Dan, a former U.S. congressman, is president and CEO of CUNA, the leading trade association representing the nation's 11,000 credit unions and credit union leagues in all 50 states and the District of Columbia. He assumed his duties at CUNA & Affiliates in July 1996, a time of major internal and external challenge for the association. Dan has restored sound financial management to the association's business operations, unified credit unions in support of legislation protecting consumers' membership rights, strengthened CUNA's senior management, and given the association a more visible presence in Washington, D.C.

A five-term member of Congress, Dan represented his home state in Florida from 1979 to 1989 in the U.S. House of Representatives. During that time he made his mark in public service as a bipartisan consensus-builder. He served on the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Select Committee on Aging, and Veteran's Affairs Committee. He also served in the House leadership as deputy whip; and he was a member of the U.S. Secretary of State's Commission on Terrorism (the "Inman Commission").
